They resided at # 506 Willow Ave, Herkimer, N.Y. Austin B. Klock was a State game Protector at one time, and later became Sheriff of Herkimer County. It was while serving as under sheriff during the term of John M. Richards that he made the arrest of Chester Gillette, who murdered Grace Brown at Big Moose Lake in 1906. A book, "An American Tragedy" by Theodore Dreiser, recalls this noted murder.

From 1879 to 1905 he was the proprietor of a machine shop in Herkimer, and from 1911 to 1916 the sales agent for the Ford automobile in Herkimer County. An ardent deer hunter, he made annual trips into the woods each year for many years and up to within a short time of his death. A camp on the Indian River, a tributary of the West Canada, was called "Klock's Camp."-----SOK "unclassified"

New York Times

Event: Obituary

Publication: 19 Oct 1931 - New York, New York

Ex-Sheriff Austin B. Klock.

Herkimer, N.Y., Oct. 18, Austin B. Klock, a leading figure in the Chester Gillett murder case, which furnished the story for the "American Tragedy," died here today at the age of 77. He was the Deputy Sheriff of a quarter century who arrested Gillette for the murder of a factory girl and took him to Auburn Prison, where he was executed. Mr. Klock later was Sheriff.

Note: There has been movies, plays and songs written about this tragedy. The book An American Tragedy was made into a movie. The 1931 movie "An American Tragedy" used Dreiser's names, but the 1951 re-make of the movie, "A Place in the Sun" used an entirely different set of names. In this version, Chester's name is Charles Eastman, Grace's name is Alice Tripp and the "other woman" is called Angela Vickers. The district attorney is called Frank Marlowe. I have not seen the movies so I do not know the name of they used for Austin Klock, the arresting officer.

Klock Conectons; Issue # 25, August 2003

I found John C. Klock buried in Cheneyville, Louisiana at the Trinity Episcopal Church Cemetery. Buried in the Klock Plot. There is also a Klock Road in Cheneyville. There is also a Cheneyville in Quebec, Canada. On 4/23/2003, I wrote the Church in Cheneyville, Louisiana, to see if I can find any more information on this family. I did not receive a response from the Church, so I sent letters to every Klock that lived in Louisiana. I received several responses from the family and talked on the phone with John L. Klock and Estee Smith. Estee Smith, who lives in Odessa, Texas, sent me information on their Branch of the Klock Family. This information has been added to this tree. Below are the people that are buried in Cheneyville, Louisiana, Trinity Episcopal Church Cemetery.

Deselle, Amelia K	1876-1912

John Charles Klock occupation was listed as a mechanic on his marriage certificate. Later census list him as a carpenter. His religion was Methodist. His Father left his family for what ever reason and John Charles found him living in Nebraska working as a blacksmith. John Charles was married twice. After the death of his first wife, Ann Martindale, he married Camilla and moved first to Nebraska. They did not like the climate of Nebraska and moved his family to Louisiana where he settled and raised his family.

John Charles Klock was visiting his daughter, Christina, ( the only child from his first marriage to Ann Martindale ) who lived in St. Catharines, Ontario. He had been there about two months when he died from chronic intestinal nephritis. His birth date is listed as September 17, 1843. on his death certificate. His age is listed as 78 years, 11 months, and 13 days.

Also I found an obit on Philip H. Klock who lived in Cheneyville, La.
